Medieval Scandinavian law, also called North Germanic law, was a subset of Germanic law practiced by North Germanic peoples. It was originally memorized by lawspeakers, but after the end of the Viking Age they were committed to writing, mostly by Christian monks after the Christianization of Scandinavia. Initially they were geographically limited to minor jurisdictions (lǫgsögur), and the ...

Byzantine law was essentially a continuation of Roman law with increased Christian influence. Most sources define Byzantine law as the Roman legal traditions starting after the reign of Justinian I in the 6th century and ending with the Fall of Constantinople in the 15th century.. Though during and after the European Renaissance Western legal practices were heavily influenced by Justinian's ...

Litigation is not a modern invention, and the medieval law courts contributed their fair share to the bulk of the surviving public records. The English legal system was a complex one, and remained in a continual, and rather chaotic, process of evolution throughout the medieval and early modern period.
