KU's graduate program in creative writing proved to be the perfect foundation for Danny's success as a poet – he published his first chapbook Uncle Harold's Maxwell House Haggadah in 2017, and has two forthcoming publications. In the program, he also picked up design skills, got involved with promoting and organizing literary events, and took a part-time job at The Raven, gaining the necessary experience that would lead him to buy the store when it came available in 2017.

Uncle Harold's Maxwell House Haggadah is either unlike any Passover Seder you've ever seen, or exactly like every Passover Seder you've ever seen. Following the order of the Seder service, Uncle Harold's humorously explores the impact of commercialism, grief, exodus, baseball, and (gasp!) non-Jewish significant others on the suburban Jewish family.
